AFTER INFLUENZA, PNEUMONIA AND OTHER ACUTE INFECTIONS

The general action of Bynin Amara is manifested by increased tone of the nervous, muscular, and cardio-vascular systems. It stimulates the digestive organs, improves the flagging appetite, corrects anæmia and aids nutrition generally.

The marked asthenia and nervous depression which are prominent features of the post-influenzal state, yield rapidly to its influence. A course whenever there is any indication of lowered resistance is a valuable safeguard against infection.

Deep, natural sleep is an important restorer of energy, both in health and convalescence. A cup of Bourn-vita taken last thing at night is always a help. Bourn-vita is made of eggs, malt, milk and chocolate. It is soothing to taste and easily digestible.

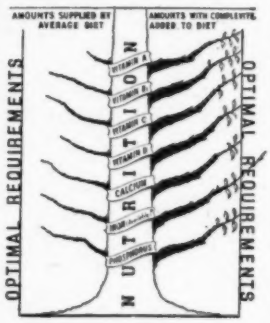
BOURN-VITA

Vitamin therapy for post-war debility

The wars are over, but where is the elation—or even the placidity—of peace?

Many people are feeling apathetic, "flat," even depressed.

When these conditions have no organic basis they may be connected with unavoidable food restrictions. A well-balanced mineral and vitamin supplement, e.g., Complevite, which enriches the diet to the optimal level in many of these important factors, may prove the most efficient means of restoring the patient's normal outlook and activity.



The adult daily dose provides:—Vitamin A 4,000 i.u., vitamin B_1 200 i.u., vitamin C 400 i.u., vitamin D 300 i.u., calcium 153 m.g., iron 68 mg., phosphorus 250 mg., trace minerals 3 p.p.m.

'It's a fortunate head that has never ached' —Old Proverb.

Medical science has progressed immeasurably since the days when the most usual way to anæsthetise a patient before a surgical operation was to knock him out with a blow on the chin. Hygiene and better living conditions have eradicated some of the worst diseases of the middle ages; medical science has discovered remedies for others. Yet one type of ailment has increased: nerve-strain is more widely prevalent than it was in the days before our civilisation produced the modern complicated technique of living. And nerve-strain finds its expression in the wearing, nagging nerve pains of every day: headache, toothache, neuralgia . . . danger signals, all of them, warning the sufferer that something needs looking into.

What that something is, and how to set it right, only a doctor or a dentist can decide, but in the meantime every sufferer has the means to allay the pain itself. That is what 'Cogene' is for; that is why doctors prescribe it.

'Cogene' is a scientific combination of four pain-relieving drugs, in tablet form. It is non-habit forming and produces no harmful after-effects as a single drug is apt to do; yet it will relieve the most harassing nerve pain in a surprisingly short time. Ask your doctor about 'Cogene'. It can be bought from any chemist at 1/1½d. a tube.

Never forget, though, that while 'Cogene' will relieve the pain, it cannot remove the cause of the pain: only a doctor or a dentist can do that.

JOURNAL OF THE ROYAL COLLEGE OF NURSING

Nursing Times

VOL. XLI No. 44 SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1945

EDITOR: MISS K. F. ARMSTRONG, S.R.N., S.C.M., DIPLOMA IN NURSING, LONDON UNIVERSITY

To Avoid a Breakdown

THE present is a very critical time in nursing history. Everyone is crying out about the shortage of nurses and saying that the hospital system is in danger of breaking down this winter, particularly if epidemics arise in devastated, hungry Europe and spread to this country across the 'ditch' which kept the German Army at bay, but is unlikely to check the spread of germ infections so effectively. All sorts of people—not as a rule people who are well informed—are putting forward suggestions which they would like to see forced upon the nursing profession had they the power to do so. The nursing profession must stand together, educate the general public, show it the real troubles, and help to solve them. It must stand wholeheartedly for what is right, and show the fallacies of panaceas which appear to be short cuts, but are 'quack remedies' that would make the final position worse than it is to-day.

Why, many people ask, are fewer people entering the profession to-day? The answer is 'They are not.' More are coming in, but the large hospitals have all increased their beds and require more nurses, with the result that their nursing staffs are increased from 200 to 300 nurses, from 300 to 400, and so on. As a result the more popular training schools, particularly the training schools attached to medical schools, which have a high reputation and can give their student nurses an excellent education and training are taking more candidates and fewer are left to go to the less popular schools which may give as good or better training and experience, but have not the name and reputation to attract girls from all over the country.

"How can we explain the fact that out of every hundred girls who start training less than fifty arrive in due course on the State register?" asks the editorial in the Medical Press and Circular. The writer puts it down to the fact that those who direct nursing affairs are completely out of touch both with the rank and file and with public opinion. This is obviously ridiculous: do the rank and file or the general public determine what shall be necessary to qualify a man or woman as an engineer, a doctor, a teacher? Of course not: all they can do is to say whether the engineer, the doctor, the teacher—the product of the course of training—is efficient, or not. None of the writers complains that the State-registered nurse is not competent of doing nursing work.

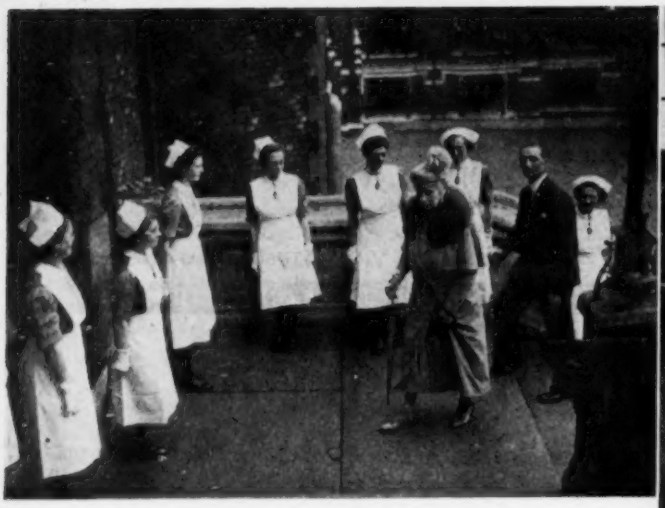
Why, in fact, do so many nurses fail to complete the course? The chief reason lies in the fact that many matrons have to accept unsuitable candidates. Many of the less popular training schools must just take anyone, because the student nurse is essential as a pair of hands to do not only the nursing, but also the domestic work of the hospital. In any other training, if those directing the training have forty places to fill but only get thirty-five suitable applicants they take the thirty-five, and leave the other places empty. The matron, because hospitals depend almost entirely on student labour (a ward has a trained sister and, perhaps a trained staff nurse, with four or five student nurses for the day shifts as a general rule), must take forty persons for the forty vacancies, if she can get them, no matter how little hope there is that the candidates can complete the course and do efficient work. Some matrons will confess that they know the candidate can never qualify, but that they take her and send her in for the State-preliminary examination until she has failed twice, paying her examination fees for her—but knowing she has not the capacity to cope with the work.

Many of these girls should come to the hospitals as ward orderlies or domestics: they will not do that because to come as a nurse makes them feel, even though some must realize they cannot succeed, that they are "bettering themselves." The only way to improve this high rate of failure is to give matrons the duty of saying "I have only thirty-five suitable candidates for forty places: either beds must be closed or five extra trained nurses or orderlies must be appointed."

Of course a very serious cause of the shortage of nurses is the reduced birth rate that has resulted from birth control, which is not the fault but the misfortune of the nursing profession, for the increased span of life has now added to the persons needing nursing care. This fact means that we have got as a country to be economical in the use of young people's labour. The hospitals never have been economical in the use of nursing labour. Because nurses in training are a source of cheap labour, they use them to run errands throughout the hospital between wards and dispensary, wards and X-ray departments, wards and kitchens, and so on, as well as for much purely domestic work. This squandering of nursing time should be stopped at once.

Of course there always will be one reason which will make nursing and domestic work unpopular, and which cannot be overcome. Patients need care for 24 hours—there must be a 24 hour service, some must work in the evenings and week-ends when the majority of other workers are free. This is a factor which demands some sacrifice of the nurse and domestic worker. When almost everyone else is free, someone has to go on with the essential

"Are these bananas?" Two-year-old Stephen Parsons, who is in the Charing Cross Hospital with coeliac disease, received hundreds of bananas as the result of a radio appeal



Queen Mary recently presented long service badges to members of the Queen's Institute of District Nursing who have completed 21 years' service. Above: nurses form a guard of honour outside the Hall, Lincoln's Inn. Right: Queen Mary presenting the badges; the Earl of Athlone is seen on the right nursing and domestic services. It makes the work unpopular with those who put themselves and their amusements before their work and the satisfaction that comes from it. There lies, however, the point in favour of nursing. The work is so interesting, so satisfying, that to the majority it is much more important than off-duty and leisure. They enjoy it so much that their lives are full of interest, even though they may not have the energy, or time, to play games and take part in discussions with their old school and club mates. However, some shirk from making this sacrifice, and mothers and fathers shirk from making it too. The best answer is an unbroken eight-hour shift for the majority with off-duty times fixed well in advance.

Both the Hospital and the Lancet have recently suggested that the training be shortened to two years on the lines of the assistant nurses' training, with some revision, to produce the 'general grade nurse:' they would make all nurses go through this training and those who wish to qualify for key positions such as ward sister, matron or sister tutor would go on to a further two years' training. This suggestion is obviously designed for the easy staffing of the smaller hospitals, which under present arrangements must either train assistant nurses or use trained staff, orderlies and domestics. It is contrary to the best interests of nursing, for the intelligent, capable woman is likely to be lost to the profession entirely if she is given a very elementary training over the first two years which does not arouse her interest and satisfy her, because it is not using her abilities to the full. The academic training of the nurse is of use to enable her to carry out her simple nursing duties intelligently and efficiently. The 'general grade nurse' is the one who should be using all day long the knowledge of anatomy, physiology, bacteriology and hygiene to give her routine nursing care and treatments intelligently and well, and to adapt them to circumstances as required. To suggest that the ward sister, departmental sister and matron are the only ones who require to be highly trained is misleading; they need training in ward and hospital administration and the management of staff but they do not require any more training in nursing than does the general grade nurse.

Further, with the reduced number of young women suitable for nursing work and desirous of doing it, in spite of the sacrifices to which we have already referred, a two year training for the majority of them would mean that the hospitals would need to recruit a third as many suitable candidates again to equal the present position. When we know that there is such a shortage among the younger age groups can we really hope for anything but a worsening of the present position if training is reduced from three years to two? Our hospital system would indeed collapse.

Topical Notes

The Nation's Thanks

THE motion was submitted to the House of Commons and the House of Lords on Tuesday, expressing gratitude to the Services on the victorious end of the war and both Service and civilian nurses may be well proud of the words which refer to them and their work:—"That the thanks of this House be accorded to the women of the Auxiliary and Nursing Services for the ready self-sacrifice and efficiency with which they performed their arduous duties of sustaining their brothers in action against the enemy.... That the thanks of this House be accorded to the police, the fire service, the civil defence and hospital services and to all those who worked with them in combating the effects of air raids: for the relief and comfort they brought to many thousands in suffering and distress; and for their unflinching endurance of hardship and dangers....." The motion was carried with the cheers it deserved.

Cheerful Thanksgiving

THE Queen's Institute of District Nursing had a most impressive thanksgiving service in St. Martin-in-the-Fields last Wednesday, conducted by the Bishop of Croydon. The lovely old church was filled to capacity, and such joyous hymn as 'Praise My Soul the King of Heaven' and 'He Who Would Valiant Be,' were sung with thankful hearts, led by the choir of Queen's Nurses. The Bishop who had met Queen's Nurses all over the country had much to say in praise of them, and in speaking of the air raids during the war, said how wonderful it was that only one church in Croydon had been hit by bombs.

Essential Relief

AN excellent survey of the fundamental causes of the present position of nursing shortage, together with long-term plans to overcome them, appeared in the Sunday Times of October 28, following the articles by Dr. Charles Hill and Miss E. E. P. MacManus which have already aroused such wide interest. It comes from Lord Horder who, as Chairman to the Nursing Reconstruction Committee set up by the Royal College of Nursing in 1942, has studied nursing problems from the nurse's angle, and understands the difficulties and abuses of the present system. He demands what the nurse herself demands—relief from domestic duties, time to study and gain professional skill, relief from nursing responsibilities which should be carried by trained nursing staff. These are the real remedies to the shortage, and demand the Government grants to nurse-training schools recommended by the Athlone Committee, but never awarded by a country that gives financial assistance to the training of teachers and doctors, but leaves the student nurse to pay heavily for her own professional training by the nursing and domestic work she has to undertake.

The Spoken Word

THE Student Nurses Association's Annual speech-making contest for the Cates shield is always happy and stimulating but 1945—the history-book year of peace—will be remembered in the annals of the Association for the subject, "Leadership," and also for the fact that for the first time for six years representatives from all the units in Northern Ireland were able to come. Now, more than ever before, young people are learning to express themselves clearly so that they may meet, as at the World Youth Conference, to discuss matters of national and international importance and make the world a cleaner and better place.

Good News from Shanghai

DR. W. S. FLOWERS, medical superintendent in China of the British Red Cross Society and Order of St. John of Jerusalem is the author of a preliminary report, dated September 11, 1945, Shanghai, and published in the British Medical Journal of October 27, on the British inmates of the civil assembly centres. Despite crowded living conditions (40 square feet, per person), uncertain sanitary arrangements and an average level of 1,700 calories a head, no serious epidemics broke out. There was, of course, malaria, dysenteric diarrhoea and in one camp amoebic dysentery, in another whooping cough, and sporadic cases of encephalitis japonica: otherwise the condition of the people and children was well maintained. 'This has been largely due,' the report reads, 'to the untiring labours, vigilance and medical nursing care provided by a fine team of doctors and nurses in each camp, and dental facilities were made possible by a good team of dentists.' Nevertheless, Dr. Flower says, the people are all obviously very tired, many are anaemic, have lost weight and are eager to escape camp life which produces an unreliable memory and narrowed outlook and interests. The almost unbelievable part of the report is that the mortality has been so low 'if anything lower than it would have been had the people been living the normal rushed life of civilization.' The majority of deaths were among the aged from natural causes.

Salaries for Mental Nurses in Scotland

THE Fourth Report (Mental Nurses) of the Scottish Nurses' Salaries Committee of the Department of Health for Scotland has now been published, and comparison of the scale of salaries with that of the Rushcliffe Mental Nurses Sub-Committee's Report, (August, 1944), reveals some points of interest. For example in England and Wales the matron of a mental hospital of 300 to 499 beds receives a salary of £300 a year, rising by annual increments of £25 to £450. Emoluments are rated at £140 a year, making a total of £440, rising to £590. In Scotland, the matron of a mental hospital of 300 to only 399 beds receives a starting salary of £350—with emoluments valued at £150—rising by £25 a year to £500, that is, a total of £500 to £650. On the other hand, the qualified senior sister tutor, in England and Wales, receives a starting salary of £260—emoluments £120—rising by £15 a year to £350, while in Scotland the starting salary is £250—emoluments £120—rising by annual increments of £10 to £350, i.e., a lower starting salary and a lower rate of increase. Ward sisters in mental hospitals in England and Wales start at the same salary as those in Scotland, i.e., £150 a year (with the same emoluments of £100) but rising by annual increments of £10 to £200 in five years with one additional service increment of £20 after ten years' service. Scottish ward sisters, in mental hospitals, however, do not reach the sum of £200 a year until the eighth year. In the twelfth year the salary is £220, after which it remains stationary until the 16th year, when it rises to £230. Ward sisters, as well as deputy sisters and staff nurses who are general State-registered nurses as well as qualified mental nurses are to receive additional allowance rates of £10 per annum.

Some Anomalies

STUDENT Nurses, in mental hospitals, if general State-registered nurses receive the same salary and emoluments in both England and Wales and in Scotland, namely first year, £90, second year £100, with emoluments valued at £75. But in Scotland those who are not general State-registered nurses start at £60 a year (emoluments £75) rising to £80 in the fourth year, while in England and Wales they start at £70, rising to £90 (emoluments £75) in the fourth year. It seems a pity that these discrepancies should continue to exist, as the tendency must always be for those hospitals which pay the better rates to benefit at the expense of the others.

To "Civvy Street"

THERE are nine women on the Resettlement Committee which the Government has set up to help the 7,000,000 persons in the Services back into 'Civvy Street.' Although large numbers of the demobilized women will be nurses and persons with nursing experience or experience in domestic work, and hospitals have many beds closed for lack of nurses and domestic staff, the Government has not included one nurse to give first-hand advice about the nursing profession. With nursing a number one priority, this oversight seems a pity, to say the least of it.

Inhaling Penicillin as Spray

NEW methods of giving penicillin without discomfort were detailed to the Annual Congress of the Chartered Society of Physiotherapy last Thursday by Mr. A. Dickson Wright, M.S., F.R.C.S., D.T.M. & H. They include coating the penicillin with a substance which will protect it from the acid in the stomach and allow it to pass into the intestine and be absorbed there, and absorbing penicillin in the mouth by having it in the form of a lozenge. Penicillin may also be taken as snuff and recently it has been found that an excellent way is to breathe a fine spray of penicillin solution. Penicillin inhaled in this manner destroys any

NEW MATRON OF LEICESTER ROYAL INFIRMARY

Miss Clara Bell, newly appointed matron of the Leicester Royal Infirmary, will take up her new duties in January on the retirement of Miss M. F. Hughes. Miss Bell, a trainee of Guy's Hospital, London, is at present Lady Superintendent of "Guy's U.S.A. Hospital" at the Wildernesse, Kent germs in the trachia and bronchii and then, entering the blood, overcomes any germs in the bloodstream, thus attacking the infecting organisms from several directions. With penicillin available in large quantities it is no longer necessary to concentrate on economising with the drug; the patient's comfort can come first and, even if injections are resorted to, a dose of 200,000 units may be given which will last the person for twenty-four hours. Penicillin is now extracted in pure form and chemists have roughly determined its formula, although they have not yet been able to synthesize it. At present, Mr. Dickson Wright pointed out, all the penicillin in use in the world has been extracted from cultures descended directly from that grown in Sir Alexander Fleming's now famous mould in which he first observed the drug's action.

The Greatest Medical Discovery

"WE hear a great deal about the debt which civilians owe to the forces. I think we should know about this other lease-lend-in-reverse," said Mr. Dickson Wright, when he remarked that before D-Day penicillin was not available for civilians, with the result that persons had to die with the remedy quite near, only "reserved for the forces." Mr. Wright thought penicillin to be one of the greatest of scientific discoveries. It affected not one disease but hundreds, not one branch of medicine but all branches. "Before penicillin was found, two or three thousand mothers died every year in this country from childbirth fever, with all the precautions in the world. Now there will be no more such deaths," he said. "Pneumonia will be treated so easily and effectively that in future there will be no complications, no abscesses in the lungs or pleural cavity. Venereal disease will not be a problem any longer. Septicaemia is mastered." Further, no one had previously thought much about going to the fungi for protective substances; a new vista of possibilities was opened up. "I think we are on top of nearly all our afflictions as a result of the discovery of penicillin," Mr. Wright concluded. Mr. Dickson Wright is a surgeon at St. Mary's Hospital, Paddington, and he was associated with the early investigations into penicillin. He was speaking instead of Sir Alexander Fleming, who was in Denmark.

Auxiliary Hospital for Birmingham

THE Birmingham County Red Cross, at the request of local doctors, is opening an auxiliary hospital which, if successful, may be the forerunner of a chain of similar hospitals in outlying districts of the city. A large house, at King's Heath, is to be converted and staffed by local doctors and Red Cross personnel, and here patients who cannot be nursed at home but who do not require the services of a major hospital will receive treatment. The plan is a good one and, if the experiment proves satisfactory, should solve many problems both for the hospitals and for the sick. But will the Red Cross personnel include at least one trained nurse? As, presumably, the doctors will not be resident, it would be necessary to have on the premises someone who could detect early signs of complications which must inevitably occur in certain cases.

Care of the Illegitimate

BETTER provision for the help and care of the unmarried mother and her child, through co-operation between local authorities and existing voluntary agencies is recommended by the Secretary of State in a circular recently issued by the Department of Health for Scotland. The problem has acquired new importance in view of the increased numbers of illegitimate births during war years, and last year, when the mortality rate was 108 per 1,000 illegitimate births local authorities were asked by the Department to consider improvements for the care of these children. The recent formation of a Scottish Council for the Unmarried Mother and her Child, representing all the Scottish voluntary organisations concerned with this problem will give an opportunity for greater co-operation in this field of social welfare. It is suggested that, to this end, local authorities should consider the appointment of social workers who would maintain contact with health visitors and other appropriate officers. As the voluntary agencies' great need is more accommodation for the unmarried mother before and immediately after confinement, the Secretary of State is asking local authorities to assist in finding or making additional suitable accommodation. It is stressed that the best solution is for the expectant unmarried mother, and later for her child, to live in her parents' home, but as this is often difficult or impossible, local authorities could provide reliable guidance and help on such matters as accommodation, aliment, employment, foster-parents and legal adoption.

Report on Deaf-Mutism

DR. GRANT Keddie's report on "Congenital Deaf-Mutism in Scotland" has been commended by the Scientific Advisory Committee as a valuable contribution to the meagre literature available on this important subject. Published by the Department of Health for Scotland, of which Dr. Keddie is a Medical Officer, the report is a factual survey accompanied by appendices giving statistics of the position in the 35 Scottish counties. Dr. Grant Keddie has submitted to detailed investigation particulars of 928 cases of congenital deaf-mutism who had received tuition in one or other of the schools for the deaf in Scotland during the course of the 20 years ended April 30, 1944, and special attention has been paid to the 721 cases born during the period 1918-1937. The report has been submitted to a sub-committee on nutritional problems of the Scientific Advisory Committee.

Interesting Facts

RESULTS of the investigation show that the relative incidence of deaf-mutism is very high in Zetland and Caithness; substantially high in Moray and Nairn, Kirkcudbright and Aberdeen city; and appreciably high in Wigtown, Ayr, Lanark, Inverness, Angus, Dundee city and Aberdeen county. On the other hand the relative incidence is extremely low in Roxburgh; very low in Ross and Cromarty, Peebles, Berwick and Midlothian, and appreciably low in Stirling, Orkney, Dumfries, Perth and Kinross, Fife and East Lothian. Although it was not his intention, originally, to draw conclusions as to why congenital deaf-mutism was more prevalent in some areas than others, Dr. Keddie draws attention to the following facts:—those areas shown to represent a high relative incidence are for the most part situated either in the north or north-east, or extreme south-west; many have within their boundaries a large number of fishing communities; a number are sparsley populated and at some distance from the denser centres of population. Those presenting a low relative incidence are situated mainly in the south-east or in the eastern part of the "Central Belt"; and though predominantly rural in character, have convenient access to the larger centres of pupulation. Copies of the report can be obtained from H.M. Stationery Office, 13a Castle Street, Edinburgh, or through any bookseller.

Away with Drudgery

THE way to a "drudgery-free" future is indicated at the Women's First Electrical Exhibition which was opened at Dorland Hall, Regent Street, on October 12, by H.R.H. the Duchess of Kent. Lord Brabazon of Tara, President of the British Electrical Development Association, explained that the exhibition was a present from "E.D.A." to "E.A.W." (Electrical Association for Women) on the latter's 21st birthday. The Duchess of Kent referred to the technical skill shown during the war by women in the services and in industry, and observed "this knowledge can be adapted to peace-time uses." She pointed out that by using labour-saving appliances housework might be made "a part-time pleasure instead of a full-time burden." At the luncheon which followed, Sir Stafford Cripps, President of the Board of Trade, said that the introduction women had obtained into knowledge of electricity would help them to enter the electrical industries and make careers there.

Efficiency Plus—

THE most attractive feature of the exhibition was the model dining-kitchen, with its plastic flooring, table tops and curtains; its spotless paint, deep cupboards and smooth-surfaced cooking stove, and the transparent china cupboard situated between the dining-bay and kitchen and operative from either side. A "Home Laundry" which soaks, washes, rinses and partially dries the clothes all with the space of 40 minutes, while the housewife goes out shopping, also attracted much attention. The physiotherapy section exhibited recent models of radiant heat and ultra violet lamps and short-wave therapy apparatus. V.A.D.s from the Q.A. Military Hospital, Shenley, exhibited a "shock cradle," for the treatment, by warmth, of patients suffering from the effects of shock, and members of the different services explained some of the many electrical appliances made and operated by women during the war. The object of the Electrical Association for Women is to collect and distribute information about electricity as it affects the home, public welfare, hygiene, medicine, etc., and the exhibition contains much to interest nurses and women in every walk of life.

SEVERE SPINAL INJURY COMPLICATED BY QUADRAPLEGIA—

A case history recorded by B. E. WALLER, S.R.N., S.C.M., Sister Tutor and E. McCAULEY, S.R.N., Sister-in-Charge of the Spinal Unit, Royal National Orthopaedic Hospital, Stanmore, Middlesex.

Illustrations by Ione Penrose, Student Nurse.

ON September 20, 1944, a guardsman, aged 18 years, dived by mistake into shallow water 4 feet in depth, and striking his head on the bottom, "felt something give in his neck," which was hyperflexed. Immediately he was unable to move both his upper or lower limbs.

He was admitted to a general hospital where on examination cranial nerves were normal, pupils equal, but there was flaccid paralysis of all four limbs, with absent reflexes. Sensation was normal above and including the infraclavicular fossa and shoulders. Clinically this indicated a total cord lesion below the fifth cervical segment and on X-ray the patient was found to have a unilateral dislocation of the fourth and fifth cervical vertebra (Fig. 1). The spinal segment of the fifth cervical vertebrae was intact. An attempt was made at reduction by a Glisson's sling but failed. The patient was put on continuous traction by means of a calico sling tied round the chin, the bed was tilted, using his own weight as an extending force, overnight. No catheterisation was undertaken.

On Admission to this Unit

At 4 p.m. the following day the patient was admitted to this hospital. He was received into a special tilting bed (Fig. 2) with a Sorbo mattress and no pillows; as he was still suffering from shock an electric cradle was applied. Milk feeds with various flavourings were given with the aid of a spouted feeder with rubber tubing attached. His mouth was carefully cleaned after feeds. A further X-ray showed anterior dislocation of cervical vertebrae 4 and 5, with fracture of the articular processes. An antero-posterior X-ray showed no lateral dislocation. On admission his temperature was 102° F.; pulse, 160; respirations, 32.

At 6 p.m. preparations were made in the ward to apply Blackburn's skull calipers under Novocaine 2 per cent. (Fig. 3). Skull traction of this type limits the risk of adding to any existing cord injury and the tendency to re-dislocation; it prevents extensive damage to ligaments and is more comfortable to the patient than a sling. Further, it is a satisfactory means of nursing patients with quadraplegia.

Position in Bed

The back of the bed was removed, the patient's shoulders drawn to the head of the bed under the supervision of the surgeon and the temporal area of the skull, one and a half inches above the external auditory meatus, was infiltrated with Novocaine. The outer table of the skull on both sides was removed by trephining, and the skull calipers were inserted in the diploe. The wire spring mattress of the bed was then tilted, so that the head of the bed was raised and the patient's body utilised as counter traction. An iron stand (Fig. 4) with a supporting headpiece fitted with a Sorbo mat was placed under the patient's head, cord was attached to the calipers, passed over the pulley wheel on the stand, and 14 lbs. weight applied. Orders were given that the weight was to be increased on alternate days up to a maximum of 35 lbs. The patient was given Soneryl, Tabs. 11, and passed a fairly comfortable night.

On September 21, an X-ray showed some improvement in the dislocation. A supra-pubic cystotomy was performed; a Malecot catheter, 28 inches long, was inserted and was attached by rubber tubing to a drainage bottle at the side of the bed. From this date the patient's treatment followed, more or less, the usual routine treatment for all spinal injuries in this Unit, though it was necessary to use a Paul Bragg respirator to relieve dyspnoea for a time. This treatment was as follows:—

Charts.—The following charts were kept.—(a) fluid intake and urine output were charted and the fluid intake kept high, with a minimum of six pints of fluid per day; (b) temperature chart: the temperature was recorded four-hourly until normal, then twice a day; (c) reaction of urine: this was entered on the temperature chart daily; (d) sensory charts: the neurologist recorded sensory reactions at intervals.

Turning.—After removal of the calipers and Paul Bragg respirator, the patient was turned two-hourly by day in the following order:—6 a.m. on the back; 8 a.m. on the right side; 10 a.m. on the left side; 12 mid-day on the back; 2 p.m. on the right side; 4 p.m. on the left side; 6 p.m. on the back; 8 p.m. on the right side; 10 p.m. on the left side. By night the patient slept on his side, and was turned four-hourly. As he had a very thin skull, the surgeon feared that, if he was moved whilst the calipers were still in, they would slip out.

Urine.—The suprapubic catheter was changed on alternate Mondays. The wound was dressed daily with dry gauze, and the rubber tubing dipped into a bottle filled with antiseptic lotion to one-tenth its volume. A daily specimen of urine was tested for reaction and charted on the temperature chart; a weekly specimen was sent to the pathological laboratory. Bladder washouts with saline were given three times a day.

Bowels.—The patient was given 1 ounce of liquid paraffin at night, and cascara, dram 1, every four days, if no stool was passed. In this patient's case owing to constipation an enema was given every third night, and, as he was still very constipated, an ounce of castor oil was also given if needed. A bedpan was given to him at 8.30 a.m. each morning in an attempt to establish a reflex bowel action.

Treatment of Back and Pressure Areas.—Where no bedsores are present the back is washed with soap and water, and dried carefully. Superficial abrasions are treated with gentian violet. If bedsores exist, these are treated by such preparations as penicillin or sulphonamide powder applied with a spray. A swab is taken from all bedsores once a week and a specimen sent to the pathological laboratory for culture.

Medicines.—The patient was given mixture sodium phosphate gr. 20, until the urine was acid. Hexamine, gr. 10 t.d.s., was then given for one week alternating with mixture sodium citrate gr. 20, three times a day.

Sedatives.—Soneryl, tablets 2, were given at night as required, and Veganin, tablets 2, as occasion arose. Mistura ferri et ammonii citras ½ ounce, was given three times a day.

Below : (Fig. 5) the sloughing sore, four inches square which developed on the sacrum

Physiotherapy.—The paralysed limbs were moved once daily through all movements. Galvanism was given to those muscles which showed recovery, faradism to the remaining groups.

EXTRACTS FROM PROGRESS NOTES

The following are notes taken from the patient's case board :—

September 22, 1944.—The patient's temperature was 102°F.; pulse, 130 ; respirations, 30-40. He had obvious dyspnoea. A Paul Bragg respirator was applied and respirations were adjusted to 20 per minute. Paralysis was flaccid, but some movement was present in the right side of the body. Light diet and extra feeds were taken.

September 29, 1944.—The patient had taken light diet for several days. He was able to abduct both shoulders and flex his right elbow. The Paul Bragg respirator was discontinued as respirations had improved, and red areas due to pressure were visible where the respirator had rested on his shoulders.

October 2, 1944.—A further check X-ray showed great improvement but not complete reduction. A small scalp wound was now present due to pressure, a small area of skin was rubbed off the neck and both heels were red and threatening to break down. The suprapubic wound had broken down and urine was leaking so a Hamilton Irving box was applied. The patient's condition was weaker.

October 3, 1944.—X-rays showed almost complete reduction and the weights were reduced.

October 5, 1944.—The weights were removed and an X-ray showed no reduction ; 40 lbs. were attached.

October 10, 1944.—An X-ray showed that dislocation was less pronounced. The skull calipers were removed ; the wounds were oozing pus and were dressed with Optrex gauze. Despite two-hourly treatment, a sloughing sore, four inches by four had developed on the sacrum (Fig. 5) and a large sore at the back of the head. The sloughs were removed with soda bicarbonate solution and saline, one dram to a pint of water ; the wounds were then packed with penicillin cream until the sloughs were removed. After this, treatment was with normal saline and lotio rubra on alternate days.

October 18, 1944.—The legs were now becoming spastic and all reflexes were increased ; there was marked extensor response in the big toe. Slight movement was present in both upper arms. The sore on the back of the head now measured three and a half inches by four and a half (Fig. 6).

General Improvement

October 28, 1944.—The patient's general condition was much improved. There was a return of motor power in the right arm, and an increase in movement of the left arm. In the right leg movement was improved but there was very little sensation ; in the left leg there was no movement but marked sensation ; these findings pointed to more severe damage to the left side of the cord. The sore on the skull was now quite clean, and beginning to granulate. The patient was feeling much more cheerful.

December 1, 1944.—Power on the right side of the body improved and weak voluntary movement was present throughout the left side. A small superficial sore had now developed on the left shoulder blade.

December 5, 1944.—The suprapubic wound had improved greatly and drainage by means of a catheter and bottle at the side of the bed was recommenced. The instrument maker took a cast for a celluloid collar.

December 23, 1944.—The patient was wearing his collar (Fig. 7) and, sitting up in bed in it, complained of some pressure on his left shoulder.

December 30, 1944.—The patient stopped wearing the collar owing to the pressure and liability to sores. The sores on the head and sacrum were healing slowly but much spasticity of the legs was present and there was some induration present over the right hip.

January 8, 1945.—The patient's general condition was somewhat better ; he was sitting up in bed and more interested in his surroundings and the other patients.

January 16, 1945.—All sores were healing and were quiet

Left : (Fig. 7) the celluloid collar, specially designed and made for the patient but which could not be worn for more than a few days because of pressure sores superficial. An X-ray showed that there was no further displacement and that the neck was in excellent position. The patient was taking his diet well.

February 1, 1945.—The occupational therapist fitted up a canvas stand (Fig. 9) by means of which the patient could play patience, using his right hand to move the cards. All nails, rough edges, etcetera, were covered with adhesive strapping as the patient had no sensation in his left hand.

February 19, 1945.—As there was good movement of the neck, the surgeon decided that the patient did not require any form of support. He was using his hand better, and was able to turn the pages of a book. He sat up in a chair for a quarter of an hour, and the time was increased daily. He was put into the big bath three times a week.

Physiotherapy Begins

April 12, 1945.—The neurological report stated : " Right arm has only slight weakness, and all muscles are acting satisfactorily. Left arm shows a certain amount of spasticity, the muscles of the hand are still very weak, but more movement is present in upper arm. Right leg strong." Wax baths were now commenced for the left hand, in conjunction with physiotherapy.

April 21, 1945.—He commenced to play draughts and chess and took an active interest in both games.

May 17, 1945.—The small wounds of the skull and the large bedsore were healed. The patient's hair was allowed to grow to cover the sore. The sacral sore was also almost healed. He was able to feed himself with the right hand and to write legibly. The left hand was weak but there was less spasm in the legs and he was able to stand if supported. A Donald Rose apparatus was fitted to the suprapubic wound, urine was not yet passed per urethra and the catheter was spigoted twice a day to encourage the passing of urine. The patient remained up in a chair for six hours per day ; he was attempting to make a small canvas bag under the supervision of the occupational therapist.

COMMENTS

The two main problems in caring for patients with paraplegia or quadraplegia are bedsores and urinary infection.

Bedsores.—The cardinal feature in the treatment of bedsores is the relief of pressure, otherwise treatment is useless. Patients must therefore be turned at least two-hourly and if necessary every half an hour. The sore must be kept clean : simple cleaning with saline if combined with relief of pressure achieves miracles. Sepsis may be dealt with by such preparations as penicillin cream and systemic penicillin ; Dakin's solution and eusol may also be used although some authorities believe that they inhibit granulations. Sloughs may be removed by syringing with a solution of bicarbonate of soda ; by hydrogen peroxide, but the latter cannot be used in conjunction with penicillin which it destroys ; or by excision. The healing of the sore depends to a considerable degree on the general health of the patient, so that anaemia, low blood protein and any focal sepsis must be dealt with.

General Health.—Anaemia and low blood protein are corrected by transfusions.

Urinary Infection.—The cardinal point in prevention of urinary infection is to secure free drainage of the bladder. Suprapubic cystotomy is, therefore, performed in most cases and the bladder kept clean by washing out daily, in through a urethral catheter and out through the suprapubic catheter. Urinary antiseptics appear to be of little avail, and it is most important that the patient should preserve a high fluid intake to help the washing out process.

Mental Health.—The patient must never be allowed to think himself useless. He needs sympathetic treatment with emphasis on his future ability to get up at least in a chair, and to lead a useful existence : President Roosevelt was not prevented from becoming a great man of inestimable value to mankind by the fact of his paralysis.

MEDICAL NOTES

Sulphonamides for Surgical Operations on the Large Intestine

The risks of operations on the large intestine can be reduced by the previous administration of succinylsulphathiazole in order to suppress the growth of the coliform baccilli in the lumen of the bowel. This compound owes its antibacterial action to the slow liberation of sulphathiazole which occurs in the intestine. For pre-operative use, the dose recommended is 0.25 gm. per kgm. (i.e., 15 gm. for an average 60 kgm. or 9½ stone person), followed by 0.04 gm. per kgm. (i.e., about 2.5 gm.) 4-hourly for 3-5 days. The drug is prescribed in conjunction with a low residue diet, the use of cathartics and enemata being kept to a minimum ; no enema should be given in the 48-hour period preceding operation. Liquid paraffin should not be administered, since it interferes with the action of the drug ; and, for the same reason, watery diarrhoea, if it exists, should be relieved. The action of the drug is also hindered by hard constipated stools and by ulceration of the intestine.

After from 1 to 7 days (usually from 3 to 5 days) on this regime, the coliform bacterial count will have fallen from about 10,000,000 to less than 1,000 per gram of wet stool, the bowel will have become empty and the motions (which number 2-4 per day) small, semi-fluid and relatively odourless. The patient is then ready for operation. Post-operatively, administration of the drug is resumed as soon as the patient can take an ounce of warm water without undue nausea ; this post-operative administration is an important part of the treatment. The dose is the same as before operation, viz., 0.04 gm. per kgm., 4-hourly. The treatment is continued for 1 to 2 weeks, depending on the condition found at operation.

Succinylsulphathiazole is of very low toxicity, doses as large as 70 gm. per day having been given without ill effects. However, cases have been described of patients becoming sensitive to sulphathiazole under this treatment, and having a typical febrile reaction about the 8th day. Anorexia, without vomiting, and diarrhœa have also been recorded. It has recently been reported that the new but analogous compound, phthalylsulphathiazole is even more effective than succinylsulphathiazole in pre-operative reduction of the bacterial content of the intestine : its bacteriostatic activity in the bowel is 2-4 times that of the older drug, and it is stated to be still less toxic (Poth & Ross : Texas Rep. Biol. Med., 1943, 1, 345 ; J. lab. clin. Med., 1944, 29, 785).—The Medical Use of Sulphonamides, issued by His Majesty's Stationery Office, 1945.

passers-by from inadvertent exposure to radiation, research workers constantly use it in experiments in the hope of finding new methods of cure by liberating atomic energy. The "atom-splitting" machine gives off rays which have an energy of 12,000,000 volts, and are confined within closed cylinders.

For Polycythaemia

The pictures show how red phosphorus is exposed to the radiations so that it becomes radio-active and enables the research workers to produce a radio-active sodium phosphate solution. This is used in the treatment of polycythaemia, a condition in which there are too many red blood corpuscles to depress the activity of the blood forming cells in the red bone marrow. It is also being used experimentally for malignant growths.

WORK IN A LEPER COLONY IN SOUTH AFRICA

By M. TURVEY, S.R.N., S.C.M., Matron

AMONG the many post-war battles to be fought there can be few greater than those still to be fought against ignorance, superstitions and disease: and in the fight against leprosy the three are very closely linked together.

There are about 5,000,000 lepers in the world to-day (2,000,000 of them in the British Empire alone) and a great majority of these are to be found amongst the peoples of Africa, India and the Far East, where the fear of evil spirits, the practice of witchcraft, unhygienic surroundings, as well as malnutrition, have for centuries produced just the soil most favourable for the spread of disease; and so it is that, to be really effective, the work of a leper colony must cover a large field if it is to seize the opportunities open to it, not only of arresting the disease in those already infected but of preparing the way for a more healthy form of living for those patients who return to their own houses again. It is necessary so to instil into the patients the need for greater care in all the details of their daily lives that they will be ready to train their own families and neighbours so that a barrier is built up against much that is unhealthy and unwise in the customs and habits of the people.

The First Lesson

Imagine what a strange experience it must be for an African native, certified as having active leprosy, to find himself in a leper colony; the first lesson to be learnt is cleanliness, not such a difficult task as many people imagine, for even patients from a very primitive tribe like the Pondos very soon appreciate a daily bath (is it small wonder such a thing is new to them if they have to walk three or four miles from their own homes as many have to, fetching water from the nearest stream for drinking as well as for bathing!). Cleanliness in detail is not so quickly understood and accepted, regular cleaning of the teeth is foreign to these people and to suggest the removal of a decayed tooth or even a stump is asking for a great deal of argument, especially if the stump is causing no discomfort! The nose, which calls for special care, is often in the case of natives of South Africa, found to be full of snuff, and many elementary lectures have to be given before patients understand how important it is to refrain from the use of snuff and make every effort to keep their nasal cavities clean, for it is in the mucous membrane of the nose that the leprosy bacillus is most commonly found.

Unknown Factors

It has yet to be proved how the Bacillus leprae enters the system and how it finds its way into the blood stream; there is strong evidence to support the hypothesis that the infection in the majority of cases takes place through direct or close contact with the disease. It has also to be shown what factor determines the length of incubation which appears to vary from a few months to twenty or more years: the most generally accepted theory is that it is governed by the amount of general resistance on the part of the patient.

Various classifications of leprosy have from time to time been made, but most leprologists agree on the two main groups: (1) neural; (2) lepromatous or cutaneous.

Neural leprosy occurs when the bacilli have infiltrated into the nerves and any of the following symptoms may appear: thickening of nerves; anaesthesia along the course of the nerve infected; mutilation and deformity of hands or feet; restricted movement; wasting of muscles; facial paralysis; perforating ulcers of hands or feet, sometimes in advanced cases resulting in gangrene. In almost every neural case maculae appear on limbs, face or trunk, the size and degree of inflammation depends on the amount of reaction taking place in the tissues.

The following types of neural leprosy are found: (a) early cases with a good general resistance which may have few clinical signs of activity for years, other than perhaps slight anaesthesia down the inner side of forearm if the ulna or nerve is attacked and one or two small slightly inflamed maculae, not more than one inch in diameter; (b) cases where the bodily resistance is high and a tuberculoid form of maculae develop, presenting a raised and inflamed appearance; (c) cases where the bodily resistance is low and less inflamed maculae develop and infiltrate into the surrounding tissues slowly spreading outwards; in some cases there is little more than an increased depigmentation over the affected area with or without anaesthesia in the centre of maculae. The prognosis in the first two cases is good in the absence of intercurrent diseases, but the prognosis in the third type of patient is poor unless the bodily resistance can be greatly

Above: healthy babies born of leper parents in the colony creche where they are placed directly after birth to be brought up under healthy conditions. Leprosy is not a hereditary disease strengthened and any intercurrent disease completely cleaned up.

Left: mutilation resulting from neural leprosy. Perforating ulcers and gangrene in parts supplied by the infected nerves are common in advanced cases

TWO TYPES OF LEPROSY

Lepromatous or cutaneous leprosy occurs when the bacilli have invaded the cutaneous tissue, resulting in the formation of nodules which usually appear first on the face and the lobes of the ears and at a later stage on the limbs and trunk until practically the whole of the cutaneous tissue is affected; there is often an absence of part or the whole of the eyebrows, oedema of arms and legs, and as the disease advances there is congestion of the mucous membrane both of throat and nose resulting in distressing dyspnoea. The prognosis in these cases is bad; though the patient's condition may remain stationary for several years before there is a final breakdown of all resistance.

As has already been noted, much depends on the patient's general resistance and a case showing persistent neural symptoms may quite suddenly show signs of cutaneous change and rapidly become a lepromatous type, but, fortunately, this happens only in about five per cent. of cases.

Race Variation

Complications appear to vary among different races living under varying climatic conditions. In South Africa, myocarditis is common amongst the advanced lepromatous cases and there is a small percentage of blindness and deafness. Of the intercurrent diseases found amongst the lepers in South Africa venereal diseases and tuberculosis are the most common.

General treatment consists of: (a) the elimination as far as possible of all intercurrent diseases; (b) attention to personal hygiene, diet, etcetera, to establish as great a bodily resistance as possible; and (c) the cessation of sexual intercourse.

Local forms of treatment are: (a) the removal of all necrotic bone and other septic foci—this often means, if the case is advanced, complete amputation of a foot or hand; in earlier cases amputation of fingers and toes are sufficient to arrest the trouble; (b) the use of various preparations of chaulmoogra oil both for inunction and injections; under careful supervision the daily inunction of crude chaulmoogra oil all over the body following a bath proves to be a very helpful form of treatment. For injections, ethyl esters of chaulmoogra with half per cent. iodine is used, given either intramuscularly, up to 5 c.c., or by subcutaneous infiltration under the maculae, from 5 to 12 c.c., or one-minim intradermal injections ringed around the edges of the maculae, as many as 50 one-minim injections can be given at a time with very little discomfort. Chaulmoogra oil with five per cent. creosote is also used for injections and given by the same methods as ethyl esters. In very early cases with only one or two maculae it is sometimes possible to excise them completely.

The Psychological Side

The result of treatment and the progress of the case is watched by clinical changes in the skin and routine microscopic examination of smears taken from the nose and inflamed skin edges of maculae as well as from nodules of lepromatous cases. No case can be considered for discharge until nasal and skin smears have been negative for at least eighteen months. The importance of the psychological side of the work must not be overlooked; fortunately, the days are long past when admission to a leper colony meant there was little hope of ever returning home again, but, nevertheless, the period of treatment must in most cases be long, and care must be taken to ensure a happy routine, which in the case of convalescent patients may well include a certain amount of manual work, such as kitchen and laundry work, as well as gardening. Much useful work can be arranged amongst the more able patients in training them to assist bedridden cases and those who, on account of deformities, are unable to do things for themselves.

Most colonies also possess their own school where children who are well enough are able to continue their education at the same time as having treatment; gardening, cooking and handicraft are encouraged in the school syllabus in the hopes that the children will be more useful in their own homes. As leprosy is not hereditary no colony is complete without its crèche where infants can be removed directly after birth and brought up under healthy conditions.

The lives of those patients who are Christian centre round their Church which they take great pride in keeping beautiful and clean; it is from such patients that much willing service is offered in the colony, and their lives of devotion bear witness to their faith and bring to those around them hope and comfort in their life of suffering and prolonged isolation.

OUTLINES OF PHYSICAL METHODS IN MEDICINE.—By G. D. Kersley, M.A., M.D.(Cantab.), F.R.C.P.(Lond.) (William Heinemann Limited, 99, Great Russell Street, W.C.1 Price 6s.)

This book gives a brief survey of the various forms of treatment included in the field of physiotherapy. Detailed descriptions of the treatments and their effects are not included, but the book should serve to bring before its readers the possible forms of physical treatment, and stimulate further reading to obtain more detailed knowledge of these subjects. The author sets out to outline the methods only, and under these circumstances it is perhaps a pity that he attempts to cover so much ground, particularly with regard to technique of treatment, some points are mentioned, but there are inevitably certain omissions and inaccuracies, while the reader may be left with the faulty impression that the information given is an adequate basis on which to carry out the actual treatments. The book is divided into sections on electrotherapy, heliotherapy, radiotherapy, remedial exercises, massage, hydrotherapy and occupational therapy. Some diagnoses are included, particularly in the section on electrotherapy, but they are few in number and there is little explanation of them.

C.S.P.

THE INFANT—By W. J. Pearson, D.S.O., M.C., D.M., F.R.C.P., A. G. Watkins, B.Sc., M.D., F.R.C.P. (H. K. Lewis & Co. Ltd., 136 Gower Street, W.C.1; price 4s.)

This small and modest book may be recommended unreservedly As a third edition has been printed it is obvious that it is appreciated. It was written for infant welfare workers (lay and medical), home physicians, and general practitioners. To all these people it should be of great use.

The author's views on breast feeding are sound and contain helpful hints on its management and also clear instructions for weaning. They rightly emphasize the supreme importance of breast feeding for every baby. Chapter II takes up the subject of artificial feeding, treating it as a substitute to be used only when breast feeding is impossible. There is very useful information on the different forms of artificial food and the amounts needed. The section on the premature infant is boring but practical. One might suggest with diffidence that the giving of thyroid is, of course, a matter for each individiual doctor to decide.

The general rules for the care of the child are good. It seems advisable to boil teats every day, though it is argued that prolonged boiling softens the rubber, and feeding bottles, too, should be boiled once a day. The different stages of development are clearly set out and this chapter will be helpful to someone who sees a good many children rather briefly.

The remaining sections cover 'Diet Tables,' 'Recipes,' which include subcutaneous injections and blood transfusions; food value tables; daily allowance of essential food elements and notes on vitamin and mineral resources. There is a useful table of common preparations giving the vitamin content and daily dose required. Average height and weight, pulse rate, respiration and blood pressure are all covered in the final section which also contains notes on the eruption of the teeth, mutations of development, incubation periods and urinary output. The final appendices are made up of prescriptions in common use.

All this sounds a little crowded but certainly is not. There is no padding and the matter is clearly arranged. It should be a most useful reference book for the people for whom it was written and it seems likely that a fourth edition will probably be needed.

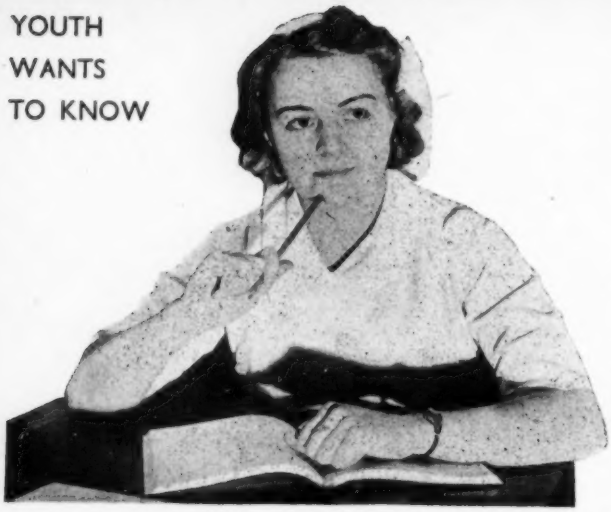
This statistical but human publication should be of great interest to factory nurses: it would be interesting to compare the sickness rates with workers in hospitals.

YOUTH WANTS TO KNOW



Adolescence is a time when the intelligence matures and reaches its maximum growth ; it is a time when the reasoning powers develop—the young person asks many questions and expects reasoned explanations

CHARACTERISTICS OF THE ADOLESCENT STAGE*—1. The Intelligence

By Dr. MARY COLLINS,
Psychology Department, Edinburgh University

AN understanding of some of the characteristics of the younger nurses under her charge should help the ward sister with her problems. These younger nurses are at the adolescent stage, a stage which at one time was thought to be the most important period in life. In recent years, however, the emphasis has been rather on the pre-school child. It is important to remember this, for if during adolescence difficulties appear, they may, in some cases, be traced back to unwise handling during the early years.

Gradual Development

Adolescence is apt to be regarded as a period of stress and strain in which difficulties and undesirable behaviour occur. Yet this is not characteristic of every adolescent. The majority generally pass through this phase of development without any very noticeable disturbance. We know that distinct physical changes occur, but from the psychological side, the mental changes can be regarded as the maturing of certain habits of thought and emotion and action which have been developing since childhood. No abrupt cleavage takes place at adolescence, for the changes that occur do so gradually. The pre-pubescent child from eight to twelve, acquiring everyday habits at home and school, immature intellectually and emotionally, and dependent on his parents, is gradually replaced by the adolescent child who has more adult standards, and who is more developed intellectually and emotionally. This takes place without any sudden change, and then the adolescent child in turn is gradually, but a little more noticeably, replaced by the fully matured individual.

Physical Changes

Adolescence is the period of the teens, and generally covers the years from twelve to twenty. The main changes that take place during adolescence can be grouped under the two headings of physical changes and mental changes.

Physical changes include the fairly sudden acceleration of growth, the different bodily changes which occur as well as the glandular changes resulting from the development of the sex functions. The child grows taller, the shape and contour of the body alter, and the voice changes, more perceptibly in the case of the boy than of the girl. These changes are often embarrassing to the adolescent. The boy or girl growing rapidly looks clumsy and awkward, and feels clumsy and awkward. This may cause many anxious moments and heartburnings. It is at this stage, that the adolescent becomes acutely conscious of personal appearance. Any blemish or defect which makes her feel different may lead to difficulties and peculiarities of behaviour. A very small person, for instance, may develop a bragging or a pompous manner, to contemplate for lack of height.

As regards the mental changes at this period, the two most important centre round the intelligence and the emotions.

Individuals are not endowed equally with intelligence and great individual differences exist. By means of intelligence tests, we can determine an individual's mental age, which may be the same as, greater than or less than an individual's chronological age. A girl of ten who tests out with a mental age of ten, has average intelligence. A bright girl of ten may test out mentally at age twelve. That is, although chronologically she is ten, mentally she is equal to the average girl of twelve, and she is said to be advanced two years mentally. Or, if brighter still, she may have a mental age of thirteen, or of fourteen or higher. A dull girl of ten may have a mental age of nine, and be one year retarded, or have a mental age of eight and be two years retarded, and so on. The results from tests are often expressed in terms of intelligence quotient (I.Q.) which is calculated by dividing the mental age by the chronological age and multiplying by 100: $\text{I.Q.} = \frac{\text{M.A.}}{\text{C.A.}} \times 100$

For example, a girl of ten with a mental age of ten, has an I.Q. of 100; with a mental age of twelve, an I.Q. of 120; with a mental age of eight, an I.Q. of 80. Below is a table showing the distribution of intelligence quotients in the general population:

I.Q.	Description	Percentage
Above 140	Genius or near genius	1
120-140	Very superior intelligence	5
110-120	Superior intelligence	14
90-110	Average intelligence	60
80-90	Dull or backward	14
70-80	Very dull or backward	5

In any profession there is a wide range of intelligence level, and allowances must be made for these individual differences.

Another fact to note about intelligence is that at adolescence the intelligence of the individual has reached the maximum growth. Before adolescence the child is still immature, and her reasoning powers are not well developed. But during the teens, her reasoning powers become fully developed. She can no longer be put off with childish explanations. This maturing of the intelligence explains the questioning of, and interest in religious beliefs.

A NEW ATTACK

HAVE other professions any suggestions to help nurses with recruitment ? A Ministry of Information film, "Teaching," which will be seen in cinemas throughout the country suggests that there is an approach and an attitude which nursing publicity lacks. Firstly, although there has been a great deal about nursing in the general press lately, has there been any mention of the basis of the joy of the profession ? Is the restoration of health, life and capacity to a sick or even dying person less interesting, less exciting or less capable of explanation to potential recruits than the canalization of the energy of youth into educational channels ? Secondly, are authorities attacking the problem of new recruits in the attitude of what advantage has the demobilized service girl to bring and how can we get over the disability that she also inevitably has ? This is the way the teaching profession is tackling the problem. It also has a scheme by which a teacher, who takes a year's full time course followed by two years practical work combined with continued education, will rank as a teacher with two years college training. The nursing profession, having continued and increased the training of recruits, has not suffered during the war as much as the teaching profession and we are thankful, therefore, that it will not be necessary to take such measures which an eminent authority said recently will lower the standard of teaching for many years.

PLASTIC SURGERY IN PEACE

A lecture given by Dr. DAVID ADLER by arrangement with the British Council

A VISITOR from Brazil, Dr. David Adler, graduate of the University of Rio de Janeiro, who has been visiting the great plastic surgery centres in this country such as those at Basingstoke, East Grinstead, St. Albans and Stoke Mandeville, to see the progress of plastic surgery in war, showed slides and films of his work in Rio, last week at the British Council. A reminder, as Sir Harold Gillies who introduced him, said, " of the peace time work which during the last five years we have had to neglect." The films, some in technicolour, showed the operations—all done under local anaesthetic, and the patient before and after operation : they included the following :—

(a) The Nose.—The patient had a saddle nose due to an untreated fracture. The surgeon inserted chips of cartilage through the nostrils. A protective covering made of specially shaped dental stent was then applied, lined with thin flannel. A month afterwards the nose was a good shape ; eight to ten months later the reaction had subsided and the results were excellent.

(b) The Ear.—The patient, aged 20, had exceedingly projecting ears. From the age of five or six when he went to school he suffered from an inferiority complex ; a bandage would not correct the deformity, as many mothers think. The operation consisted of excision of a piece of skin and a strip of cartilage followed by the insertion of fine sutures : 15 days later the ears were in correct position.

(c) The Forehead.—The patient had deeply indented scars and depression above his right eyebrow, the result of infection of the frontal bone. Pieces of cartilage were inserted under the skin and produced a finely moulded forehead.

(d) The Upper Lip.—The patient, a baby, had an angioma of the upper lip : surgery was considered better treatment than X-rays or injections. This excision must be carefully done as any small piece left may grow again. There was no scar left.

(e) The Upper Lid.—A small ectropion of the upper lid would not allow the patient to close his eye. The surgeon took a piece of skin, larger than would appear necessary, because of the retraction, from the other lid and sutured the resulting gap : it healed well with no scar. Having sutured the graft in place he loosely sutured a small roll of gauze covered by a pad on the graft to give pressure. On healing, a very slight difference in colour could be seen when the eye was shut—but the eye would shut and nothing was visible when open. The difference in colour disappeared later on.

A SUCCESSFUL OPERATION

Surgical treatment was prescribed for this baby with angioma of the upper lip. Careful excision removed the growth and no permanent scar remained

(f) The Neck and Upper Chest.—Extensive contracting scars resulting from burns were causing deformity. Under a local anaesthetic an incision was made which released the tension, and showed the amount of loss of skin. A large area of skin was taken from the abdominal wall with a dermatome and after excision of the scar tissue was sewn in position.

Cartilage.—Dr. Adler said that to save the patient a double operation he used preserved cartilage from cadavers : after removal it was placed in an antiseptic and preservative, a solution of Merthiolate, and then put in a refrigerator. It could be used even six or eight years later. He used small pieces for small defects, they produced a better contour, and diced cartilage for large defects.

Preparation of skin.—Beyond washing with soap and water no preparation of skin was done in the ward. In the theatre a solution of Merthiolate or tincture of Metaphen (untinted) was used for cleaning. After operation a dry dressing was applied and left until the third day when it was removed. Stitches were taken out on the eighth day.

The members of the medical and nursing profession who were lucky enough to be able to see the films were very appreciative and Sir Harold Gillies put their thoughts into words when he spoke of the surgeon's " lovely touch," " excellent technique and results." Mentioning the value of the work of the British Council in arranging such a visit, he said, "We can all learn from each other, whether our work is good or bad, provided we are honest.',

Australian Matron Decorated —

Miss Doherty nurses the sick of Belsen

MISS K. M. Doherty, Australian matron of UNRRA's Glyn Hughes Hospital, flew from Belsen to be decorated by the King. She received the Royal Red Cross for her services in January, 1945, as Principal Matron of the R.A.A.F. Nursing Service—a position which she held from May, 1942, until May, 1945. Under her worked about 500 trained nurses, many of whom took care of the wounded as they were flown home from bases very close to the firing line. In the summer of this year Miss Doherty went to Germany as Matron of the 550-bedded hospital, which took over the care of the sick from Belsen Camp after the party of medical students from Great Britain had done their colossal task of rendering first aid.

In a "Panzer" School

The hospital was the Lazerette of the German Panzer training school : it is a circular building with ward blocks branching out from the circle. The wards of 10 to 14 beds are well built and there are four up-to-date theatres with stainless steel fittings. There are 38 maternity beds—the mothers have lovely babies—and three tuberculosis wards, two for men and one for women; during the last few weeks ante-natal, post-natal, ear, nose and throat, eye and gynaecological clinics have been opened. Attendance of course is never compulsory, nor is anything else, although now, most patients accept all treatment when its object has been explained. Patients from the hospital and anyone recommended from among the 21,000 displaced persons in the neighbouring Panzer camp—some of whom were inmates of Belsen—use the clinics.

Miss M. K. Doherty

Miss Doherty drew a very happy picture of the hospital; although with many of the patients, language is a problem, they all smile a cheerful greeting and enjoy the daily entertainments—football matches to watch from the ward windows, dancing by the gypsies, who have now mostly gone home, and on one special occasion a concert by the Warsaw Military Band, who were all prisoners. The wards, although happy do not appear as tidy as the wards at home ! Each patient has all his or her possessions and clothes hanging round the back of the bed. Miss Doherty is, however, having bags made for them out of the disused black-out material. Her staff includes many German nurses, who work under the supervision of UNRRA nurses, Australians, Canadians, Belgians, Miss E. M. Richards, an inspector of midwives from England and Miss Demhouse, a Queen's Nurse from Scotland. They are rejoicing in the opportunity of exchanging nursing techniques and Miss Doherty enjoys her weekly Nursing Times.

THE GENERAL NURSING COUNCIL FOR ENGLAND AND WALES

MISS D. M. Smith, O.B.E., took the chair at the last meeting of the General Nursing Council and announced the news, which she felt sure members would be glad to hear, that Miss G. E. Davies, registrar, would be back after her sick leave on the following Monday. Professor R. M. F. Picken, appointed to the General Nursing Council by the Minister of Health in 1942, had written regretting that he would have to resign from the Council. His appointment to the Welsh National School of Medicine would mean that he had to disengage himself from several committees: he regretted that he must resign from the General Nursing Council for he was particularly interested in its work and was only sorry that his term of office had been during the years of war which had precluded him from attending as frequently as he would have liked. Members agreed that a letter be sent expressing their regret.

Miss Smith read two letters from the Ministry of Health concerning recent questions in the House of Commons. The first dealt with Mr. Linstead's question on the use of the title 'Christian Science Nurse' by Christian Science workers. (See Nursing Times, October 27, page 696). She had just had a telephone conversation with Mr. Linstead and Council agreed to discuss this in camera. The second letter drew the attention of Council to Mr. Messer's question (see page 730), on the need for shortening the training for nurses, and to the Minister's reply that he would convey Mr. Messer's suggestion to Council.

Other letters of interest were: (1) from the honorary secretary of the Royal Medico Psychological Association which Council referred to those members who had been at the meeting with this Association earlier in the year; (2) from Dr. C. F. V. Smout, sub-dean of the Faculty of Medicine at the University of Birmingham, saying that the University would be pleased to afford facilities for the examination for the sister tutor's diploma of the University of Birmingham; (3) from the Ministry of Health approving, until December 31, 1947, the name 'probationer assistant nurse' for assistant nurses who will eventually be admitted to the Roll as intermediate assistant nurses. After this date assistant nurses will be admitted to the Roll by examination and, according to the Nurses Act, bear the name in training of 'pupil assistant nurse.'

Four Resolutions

The Education and Examination Committee put forward four most important resolutions to which Council agreed. The first concerned the Forces Preliminary Examination; candidates who have passed this will in future be exempt from Council's Test Examination. The second provides that the concession of six months reduction in training for those with good war-time nursing experience should be available to such candidates for whichever part of the Register they elect to train. Amendments to Council's Rules to this effect will be submitted to the Minister of Health for approval. The third concerned the shortage of qualified sister tutors: the four years' (temporarily three years') post-registration experience required before candidates start the approved courses for sister tutors may, in the case of candidates whose names are on two Parts of the Register, date from admission to that Part of the Register to which they were first admitted. Amendments to this effect will be added to the draft rules now before the Minister of Health. The fourth concerned registered nurses holding posts in special hospitals whose names are not on the Part of the Register concerned. Such nurses, having held the post of sister tutor, ward or night sister for not less than two years in one training school, having attended the required number of lectures and having completed the schedule of nursing procedures (which must be signed by a nurse in a position of responsibility in the hospital and who is registered on the special Part of the Register concerned), may take the final examination for admission to the special Part of the Register without further training. This ruling applies to the Parts of the Register for Sick Children's Nurses and for Fever Nurses and the matter will be reviewed again in five years after it comes into force.

Council provisionally approved the following hospitals as training schools: (1) Affiliated training schools for general nurses.—St. Vincent's Orthopaedic Hospital, Nr. Pinner, with the Hospital of St. John and St. Elizabeth, with the National Temperance Hospital, London and with the Prince of Wales's General Hospital, Tottenham. (2) Additional Scheme.—The Royal National Throat, Nose and Ear Hospital, London with the Hampstead General and North West London Hospital Council agreed to continue approval of the following training schools: (1) Complete training school for sick children's nurses.—The Infant's Hospital, London. (2) Affiliated training school for general nurses.—Huntingdon County Hospital, Huntingdon; Baguley Sanatorium, Altrincham and the Lord Mayor Treloar Cripples' Hospital and College, Alton (this last as a school also for sick children's nurses). (3) Affiliated school for fever nurses.—Preston Isolation Hospital. The approval of the South Eastern Hospital for Children, Sydenham, as a training school for sick children's nurses was withdrawn, without prejudice to nurses already admitted for training.

Pre-Nursing Courses

Council agreed to approve the whole-time three to six terms pre-nursing at the Chislehurst and Sidcup Day Technical School to replace the course at the Bromley Day Technical School without prejudice to candidates admitted to the course.

The Madras Nurses and Midwives Council had written, it was reported by the Registration Committee, with regard to the acceptance for registration by reciprocity of nurses trained at the Bowring and Lady Curzon Civil Hospitals, Bangalore, in the Indian State of Mysore. Members approved a resolution adding to the term of agreement already in force with the Madras Council a clause accepting nurses trained at this hospital for not less than three years for registration by reciprocity.

Council approved (1) the names of 24 applicants for registration, five by examination and 19 by reciprocity, (2) the names of 62 nurses who had failed to pay retention fees for re-inclusion in the Register and (3) the admission of the names of 13 nurses to the List.

The Mental Nursing Committee reported that they had considered the question of allowing nurses, who had held posts in hospitals approved as training schools for mental nurses and for nurses for mental defectives, to enter for the final examination for admission to these special parts of the Register. Members had agreed that in the interests of mental nurses no concession should be made.

The Assistant Nurses Committee recommended that 1,088 applicants for admission to the Roll be approved and Council approved two hospitals as training schools for assistant nurses: St. Richard's Hospital, Chichester (West Sussex County Council) and St. Martin's Hospital, Bath (City and County of Bath)).

There were four disciplinary cases on the agenda. Members agreed to postpone consideration of one until next month, to postpone judgement on one for a year and to remove the names of the other two, Isabella Morrison, R.M.N., and Mary H. Holland, S.R.N., from the Registers.

Next meeting will be at 2.30 p.m., on Friday, November 23rd.

The General Nursing Council for Scotland

A meeting of the General Nursing Council for Scotland was held at 5 Darnaway Street, Edinburgh, on Friday, September 28. Sir John Lorne MacLeod, G.B.E., LL.D., occupied the Chair.

Remission of Training

The Council confirmed their previous decision to grant a remission of six months' training in the case of members of the nursing branches of the Services, nursing auxiliaries and V.A.D. members of the Red Cross; St. Andrew's Ambulance Association and St. John Ambulance Brigade, who fulfil certain conditions. Such persons will be able to enter for the nursing part of the Preliminary Examination before entering upon training or enter for the whole Preliminary Examination as soon as they complete six months' training.

Under the Nurses (Scotland) Act, 1943, 117 applications for enrolment as assistant nurses were approved. 42 applications for admission to the List of Nurses were also approved.

The names of 34 nurses who had passed the Council's Examinations and had now attained the age of 21 were submitted and their names approved for Registration; 31 applications for re-inclusion in the Register after failure to pay the retention fee were reported. All these applications were approved. Nine applications for registration by reciprocity from nurses already registered: with the General Nursing Council for England and Wales (3), the Nurses, Midwives and Health Visitors Council, Bombay (1), General Nursing Council of Eire (1), Nurses and Midwives Registration Board of New Zealand (1), Nurses Registration Board, Ontario, Canada (1), and the Joint Nursing and Midwives Council of Northern Ireland (2), respectively were reported and approved.

Finance

The report of the Finance Committee was submitted and approved and the accounts passed for payment.

It was agreed that the next meeting be held on Thursday, October 25.

The Better Way

Can you enlighten me on the subject of release for V.A.D.s now? Here are the facts of my own case: 1. I joined the B.R.C.S. as an immobile V.A.D. nursing member in October, 1942; 2. I was posted for the duration to a E.M.S. General Hospital (25 beds) where I have been ever since (since May 1, 1943); 3. I am twenty-six in January.

Does one, under these circumstances, wait for "demobbing" from the Labour Exchange, or am I allowed, now that the war is over, to make my own application for release? Would I get it, or are there certain set rules for release? Must one have a definite reason for applying for release (i.e., private nursing?) If I got my release, would I be allowed to do this? Also, are people who have applied for "enrolment to the Assistant Nurses Roll," who have done two and a half years' nursing, in a general hospital under trained staff, allowed to contact their own doctors and take on cases, or are there any other qualifications or regulations concerning the beginning of a private nursing career?

I. P. GLOVER, V.A.D.

[The best way to begin a career as a private nurse is to take a nurses' training and become State-registered. No other step could give you such a satisfactory career in the field of private nursing. If you only wish to have a career as a private assistant nurse, you should wait until you receive a reply from the General Nursing Council stating that you have been enrolled as an assistant nurse. The Ministry of Labour local appointments office (not the Labour Exchange) deals with nurses, and the officers would suggest that, if you left the hospital where you are working, you should, because of your comparative youth, help to meet the national shortage of nurses in institutions and leave private nursing for older women who have served many more years in hospital than you, and can, perhaps for health reasons, no longer undertake hospital work. You could, however, obtain release at once to take a full training as a nurse for State-registration.—Ed.]

Belsen—from Another Aspect

Much has been heard of the infamous Belsen Concentration Camp. Most of us have seen the newsreel films, and heard the graphic eye-witness accounts given by medical students and others on the radio. During the past months, whilst I have been working as a nursing sister with the Q.A.I.M.N.S. at Belsen, it has occurred to me that perhaps many people would be interested to hear of Belsen's other side.

As is well known, the terrible No. 1 camp, generally known as "The Horror Camp," was destroyed by fire, but even yet, a strange eerie atmosphere pervades the place. Belsen Camp area, which has a radius of 25 miles, is situated in a most beautiful part of the province of Hanover. In size, and appearance, it is not unlike a town of the Model Factory Worker type, often seen in England, except that the housing consists mainly of concrete flats, or "blocks," as they are called, where previously the S.S. men and their families lived. The surrounding countryside is thickly wooded, and the River Aller flows through the camp.

Within the camp area, and only a short distance from the notorious "Horror Camp," is a most luxurious swimming pool, apparently constructed for the S.S. officers and men, and now much frequented and enjoyed by the British officers and men stationed at the camp. Another feature of the "Belsen Holiday Camp" as it is jocularly called by the troops, is a modern cinema, frequently visited by the "Tommies" and the "Displaced Persons." The tented theatre is another of Belsen's amenities. A musical concert—the first to be given by the internees was held on July 18, 1945. The artists, at one time all well-known European celebrities, played and sang well, but it was, unfortunately, quite evident that much of their finesse had been lost through lack of practice. The Round House—a palatial building which we converted into a sanatorium to house some 300 patients in the acute and last stages of tuberculosis—was formerly the S.S. Officers' Club. It is a low circular building, with an imposing entrance hall, a feature of which is the very fine mosaic floor. Leading from the magnificent banquet hall, on either side, are two spacious solaria.

The former S.S. hospital, now the Glyn Hughes Hospital, was named in honour of Brigadier Glyn Hughes, of the 2nd Army. Brigadier Hughes was the first Medical Officer to enter Belsen Camp on April 15 after the Brigadier-General of Staff, British 8th Corps, had been approached by the Chief of Staff, 1st German Paratroop Army, requesting that the British take over the camp. He explained that the situation at Belsen was completely out of control, and that typhus was raging there . . . a fact which as we found later, was not an understatement. The Glyn Hughes Hospital, a well-appointed, spacious building, with its own lawns, gardens, and swimming pool, compares favourably with the private patients' block (The Duke of York Home) attached to the Royal Infirmary at Bradford, except that the Glyn Hughes is a one-storied, circular building.

This description would not be complete without a mention of the nearest town, Celle—an ancient and dignified town on the banks of the River Aller; one of the chief features of the town is the historic schloss, at one time the home of the Kings of Hanover. Another interesting building in Celle is the museum, where one may view rooms depicting peasant life in the sixteenth and early seventeenth century. One marvels at the amenities of Belsen Camp, but it is even more incomprehensible to find the ugliness and squalor of Belsen, next to the beauty and culture of Celle.

For the Children of Europe

Children by the million are in imminent danger of starving and freezing as winter comes to Europe unless immediate help comes from the countries which have food, clothing, vitamins and medicines. Helpless children cannot survive much longer unless there is a united effort to save them. Every official, humanitarian and religious agency must come to the rescue immediately or it will be too late.

We plead for generous public support of all organizations and agencies willing to co-operate. Generous financial assistance must be given so that food, medicines, vitamins and bedding may be purchased and foster-care may be provided for orphaned and homeless children. Warm clothing will also be needed in huge quantities and should be collected and sent through authorized channels. Only by immediate and co-ordinated effort can a colossal catastrophe be avoided.

A Critical Juncture

—The Branches Standing Committee at York

THE Branches Standing Committee met at York County Hospital on Saturday, October 27, and was well attended. Everyone thoroughly enjoyed the typical North country hospitality, which was happily supplemented by brilliant sunshine after a week of heavy downpours and furious gales, and was some return for the heavy work which the Branch Secretary, Miss K. Windass, and her enthusiastic supporters had done to make such a happy combination of business and pleasure for the Branch representatives.

The classrooms had been cleared for the business meetings and here Miss B. H. Moir, matron of the York County Hospital, welcomed everyone, saying how glad she was to be able to provide the necessary accommodation. Miss M. Gibson, matron of the City General Hospital, Newcastle-on-Tyne, took the chair for the last time, as her period of office came to an end.

Study Courses in the Areas

Proceedings opened with reports from the area organizers, and the high lights here came from the large number of special week or two-day and study-day courses received from every part of the country. Miss Christie, Eastern Area, told of the Tunbridge Wells and Hastings Branch Ward Sisters' Course, Miss Montgomery, Northern Area, of the Public Health Refresher Course at Newcastle, and the course on November 1-4 at Manchester. Miss Adams, Western Area, reported the Public Health Refresher Course at Oxford, which attracted nurses from Carlisle to the South coast, the Public Health and Ward Sister Courses of the lively Cardiff Branch and the study day at Taunton, which 150 persons had attended ; Miss Warren, Midland Area, told of a successful study day to mark the first birthday of the Scunthorpe Branch—may it become an annual event—of a study day in Derby on November 3, and a study week that the Birmingham Branch was planning for the first week in March, which would be a memorable event. Nothing could be more stimulating to health and growth than these efforts and the College members owe a debt of gratitude to the enthusiastic workers who spare no effort to provide them.

Miss Montgomery also voiced the gratitude of all College members to the Southport Branch for the successful arrangements that they made for the Annual Conference and particularly thanked neighbouring Branches for the donations they had made to help to meet the debt incurred by the reserving of accommodation for delegates which was not taken up because of the heavy entanglement of many nurses in these difficult days. Miss Christie mentioned the valuable effort to recruit nurses which the Brighton Branch had made over recent months, and which would culminate in a Nursing Exhibition in the spring.

News from Scotland and Northern Ireland

From Scotland, Miss Stewart reported that many members of the College and the Student Nurses' Association had helped in a recruitment campaign in the schools and among the W.A.A.F. They had made useful contacts with the girls themselves and with the teachers and the education authorities, and had helped the latter to realize the educational side of the nursing problem. A very useful student nurses rally had had enthusiastic support and the members had themselves chosen the lecture topics, psychiatry, occupational therapy, tropical diseases and orthopaedics.

Miss Sheehan, Northern Ireland area organizer, gave her first report announcing that she had visited the various Branches with Mrs. Stocken recently, and student nurses from every unit would come to the speech-making contest on November 2, for the first time for six years. Miss Mann, industrial nursing organizer, was also present for the first time ; she had already made contact with employers in industry, industrial nurses and industrial medical officers in various parts of the country and was stimulating the formation of discussion groups among industrial nurses in the College Branches. She hoped to arouse interest in group medical and nursing schemes among employers to cover the smaller factories. She was also collecting evidence and stimulating discussion concerning the training of the industrial nurse and her place in the rehabilitation scheme under the Disabled Persons Employment Act, 1944.

The Educational Department announced that in addition to the usual courses the first "Teaching of Parentcraft" Course had been held in the last academic year and eight students had gained certificates. The forty Victory Scholarships awarded to ward sisters had been taken up and many letters of appreciation had come from the lucky members to whom they had been awarded. Shortage of clerical staff had made it necessary to postpone the refresher courses planned for sisters in charge in industry ; a refresher course for sister tutors would be held early in the new year.

A Nursing Crisis

Miss Goodall told of a busy and critical quarter ; she asked for the support of the Branches in connection with developments which must result from the present time when the shortage of nurses was even more acute in spite of the growing numbers of nurses qualifying, on account of the demand for their services—a demand which the policy of the Government to establish the promised National Health Service would intensify. She reminded Branch representatives of the importance of members within the Branches working actively, organizing, representing the nursing profession locally and speaking for it, and warned them that if they did not continue vigorously to organize their own affairs others would do if tor them. She referred to the debate in Parliament concerning the use of the title Christian Science Nurse and pointed out that Mr. Bevan, Minister of Health, had agreed that the question should be discussed between those who were concerned in the matter. She also drew attention to the Industrial Injuries Bill debate (October 10, see the Nursing Times of October 20th, page 679) and referred to the references to nurses who contracted tuberculosis and other diseases and injuries. She referred to the work of the College on the National Advisory Board for the Recruitment and Distribution of Nurses and Midwives, and said that Government Departments were pressing for the extension of pre-nursing courses. The Educational Advisory Board to the Royal College of Nursing had sent a memorandum to the Minister of Education, Miss Ellen Wilkinson, asking for the grants to training schools for nurses which the Athlone Committee had recommended ; copies had also gone to the Ministry of Health and the Ministry of Labour. The Annual Conference had agreed at Southport to a conference on Mental Nursing. Since that date events had occurred which seemed to make it wise to postpone arrangements temporarily.

Maintaining Membership

Miss Goodall closed her report by referring to the difficult position of nurses who were now being demobilized after six years administrative work in the Services ; their resettlement could not be easy as the main shortage was in the staff nurse and ward sister ranks which these women had left behind them for several years. They would need guidance and help. The membership of the College now stood at 37,871 ; subscriptions became due next Thursday, November 1 ; she pressed the Branch representatives to use their influence to ensure that subscriptions were paid promptly to maintain the strength of the College, whose work had never been more important. Its subscriptions were the life blood without which it could not do more than a small part of the immense volume of work which faced it at this time of unprecedented importance in nursing history.

No Segregation

Miss Greig, Secretary to the Scottish Board reported the beginning of the Sister Tutor Course at headquarters, where the Board Room had become also a lecture room, and the Library of Nursing had been increased through the donations of the Scottish Branches and nurses. A ward sister and sister tutor conference in Glasgow had reported in favour of monthly meetings of ward sisters and sister tutors in every hospital, and area conferences of these groups at longer (quarterly) intervals from all types of hospitals. They had had discussions with the Government departments in Scotland concerning pre-nursing education courses for entrants to the profession. A trend towards the establishment of special pre-nursing schools and colleges in which candidates for the profession would be segregated had shown itself, but the Board had strongly supported the policy of making the pre-nursing course a part of the ordinary school or technical college curriculum and not segregating girls of the 14-18 year age groups from others preparing for other careers.

Miss Reedy reported that there were now 50 Public Health Sections within the Branches and much activity, and told of 847 private nurse members. The Private Nurses Section had dealt with scales of salaries and commission rates in association with the coming into force of the Regulations concerning the licensing of agencies under the Nurses Act, 1943.

Mrs. Stocken reported that the sister tutor section had added names to the roll of Qualified Sister Tutors and was arranging a conference for Saturday, November 17.

For the Student Nurses Association, Mrs. Stocken told of the happy visit of the Princess Elizabeth, their President, in July, when she received £2,500 for the Royal Navy ; the Central Representative Council had met at Luton, on October 25, and had decided to give the £373 collected in excess of the target figure to the Merchant Navy. The speech making contest would take place on November 2, and the subject would be "Leadership."

Miss Armstrong, Editor of the Nursing Times told representatives of the difficulty of getting the news and other material into the present space but said that it would now be possible to increase the size slightly and publish Branch reports in larger type, which would be a great relief to everyone. She drew attention to the reprints of the six lectures "Temperament, Character and Personality" by Mrs. Mackenzie, price 1s. 6d., obtainable from the Nursing Times, Macmillan and Co., St. Martin's Street, W.C.2, for which there had been a great demand. This ended the reports and representatives adjourned for lunch.

(Next week : the afternoon session.)

GENERAL NURSING

QUESTION 1.—Describe in detail the nursing care of a patient suffering from acute rheumatism.

The main object in the nursing of a patient suffering from acute rheumatism is to avoid cardiac strain by careful nursing with the patient at complete rest in the recumbent position. A symptom of the disease is profuse sweating, therefore the patient should wear a gown of material that will readily absorb the perspiration. It should be open at the back to facilitate nursing care. The patient is usually nursed between blankets but should they cause irritation, a thin soft one covering the patient only will suffice. The patient will have an air ring under the buttocks and a cradle over the legs to take the weight of the bed clothes. The feet may need supporting with sand bags or light splints to prevent deformity.

A morning bed bath should be given and warm sponging of the patient if necessary should be carried out during the day or night to prevent chill and unpleasant odour.

Special care must be taken of parts subject to pressure and skin folds. These must be treated four hourly or oftener if necessary. Hygiene of the mouth should be thorough as this condition is often preceded by a sore throat. All movements during toilet and bedmaking should be done with great gentleness, supporting painful joints when rolling the patient from side to side. The nurse should make herself responsible for sweeping around the bed so that it is not knocked inadvertently by a cleaner.

The physician may order local applications for painful joints, such as methyl salicylate liniment, lead lotion, or one of the medicated wool preparations. Liniments and lotions must not be rubbed in; they are applied as dressings which are kept in position with small many tailed bandages.

Sodium salicylate is the specific drug prescribed for acute rheumatism. The nurse must watch for signs of intolerance to the drug, which are nausea, buzzing noises in the ears and giddiness. Recent medical publications have suggested that the sulphonamides have a part to play in the treatment of rheumatism.

During the febrile stage the diet is chiefly nourishing fluids and fruit drinks. Later, a more varied but easily digested diet is given. Extra vitamins are usually prescribed as in many cases lack of sunshine and good food are precursors to acute rheumatism.

The temperature, pulse and respiration are recorded four hourly. The temperature is omitted during sleep but it is important to take the pulse at least twice during the night and care should be taken to see that the patient has not been disturbed and a raised pulse thus obtained through fright. If necessary the bowels are regulated by a mild aperient or simple enema as ordered.

The physician will test the patient's blood sedimentation rate periodically. The nurse must be prepared for this and chart the result as directed.

The nurse must realize that a raised blood-sedimentation rate, a raised pulse rate and if salicylates have been omitted, a raised temperature are signs of activity of the disease and possibly of early carditis.

As convalescence approaches, suitable amusement may be provided and later massage and graduated exercises are given. A long convalescence is necessary.

THE NURSE'S RESPONSIBILITY IN THE CONTROL OF VENEREAL DISEASES

An Open Conference at Glasgow

A conference, arranged by the Public Health Section, Royal College of Nursing on "The Nurse's Responsibility in the, Control of Venereal Disease," was held on September 27, at the Scottish Nurses' Club, Bath Street, Glasgow, and was a most successful and well-attended function. The Chair was taken by Bailie Violet Roberton, C.B.E., LL.D., F.R.San.I., and the speakers included Dr. N. I. Wattie, D.P.H., senior child welfare medical officer, Glasgow; Miss A. A. Graham, S.R.N., health visitor carrying out venereal disease visiting work in connection with the Tyneside scheme for the control of venereal disease; Miss J. Lobban, S.R.N., assistant supervisor, Venereal Disease Department, Public Health, Glasgow.

In her brief talk, Dr. Wattie stressed the seriousness of this problem and told her audience that it would be privileged in getting a first hand account of the methods of dealing with it from two specialists in the particular field. She would therefore make no further delay and hoped to contribute a great deal more during the discussion which would ensue.

Government Control

Miss Graham expressed great pleasure in being asked to take part in the conference and stated that it had given her the opportunity of visiting Glasgow for the first time and of hearing the city's account of its methods of dealing with the problem in question. Miss Graham referred to the methods of control, instituted by the Government during the two world wars. In 1916 the first step forward was taken—the regulation requiring councils of counties and county boroughs to set up centres and provide treatment free of charge. Owing to the regrettable fact that during the early years of the war (1939-45) the incidence of venereal disease showed a steep rise, wider legal powers had to be adopted to enable the irresponsible type of individual to be brought within the orbit of treatment and so, in November, 1942, Regulation 33b was added to the defence regulations of 1939. The speaker then went on to outline the Tyneside scheme for venereal disease control. A Joint Committee of the constitutent local authorities was set up to deal with the problem generally and consent was given by the Minister of Health for formulating an experimental scheme for a period of six months. As a basis for the scheme an American system was copied and Miss Graham was privileged in gaining first hand information of the many faces of the scheme from members of the American Army Medical and Nursing Corps who were working in London in 1943.

Patience and Tact

The almoner acted as liaison officer and had charge of all records; she formulated all reports; had full access to patients in the various clinics and carried out the usual duties of an almoner, whilst the tracing of contacts was specifically the work of the health visitor. Miss Graham enumerated the qualities essential —infinite patience and consummate tact; an excellent memory for facts and faces; a social ease of manner, whether in a drawing room, licensed premises or a private house—if he, or she, were to be a success. Information was obtained by interrogation and through Form I of 33b. A good proportion of tracing was carried out on licensed premises and this is particularly essential when the information given is very vague; for example a man might describe his consort as 'Margaret, frequents the Red Lion, blonde, fairly tall, usually wears a black coat.' Contact tracers visited premises in pairs but interrogation of the girl, when convinced that the contact is located, was carried out by one only. Sometimes a complete name and address or a Christian name and address were furnished. In each case the approach when visiting should be different and the response had been found more ready if the person were approached as a contact and not as a source of infection.

Routine Testing

Included in the scheme was provision for routine testing of serological specimens taken from expectant mothers attending ante-natal clinics, and this was perhaps one of the most important features of the scheme. The specimen was usually taken at the first visit to the clinic, and therefore, was quite readily accepted as part of the routine.

The scheme, introduced as an experiment for six months, was extended for a further six months and was now established as part of the ordinary work carried out by the Public Health Committee.

Miss Lobban gave a very colourful account of her work at the Glasgow Venereal Disease Department and stressed the necessity of keeping patients under treatment until cured. In interrogation before contact tracing, Miss Lobban was of the opinion that the most effective approach was to impress on the patient that he or she was under an obligation, not only to himself but to his contact, and in this way enlist co-operation in persuading the consort to attend for treatment. Some years ago in Glasgow a scheme was evolved in which the male and female clinics worked in co-operation. This close co-operation between both clinics could be of immense value. Wives of consorts from the male side were referred and the person being treated was given a letter inviting the wife to attend the clinic and he was also strongly urged to explain how essential this was. If after the lapse of a week the person nominated did not make an appearance at the clinic a follow-up visit was made. Prompt notification from one clinic to another of a wife or husband showing an acute occurrence of the disease or the development of a new infection, could be investigated immediately, which was an added advantage and the result of co-operation.

For Children

Miss Lobban stressed the need for accommodating patients, particularly working people, arranging an appointment during the dinner hour, for example, and thus doing away with the necessity of requesting time from work to attend the clinic. She agreed that the introduction of Regulation 33b had been a definite step forward, but in her opinion one very urgent matter had been overlooked—Miss Lobban strongly deprecated the treatment of children in adult centres and looked forward to the day when the child would be treated in the child welfare centre or school clinic.

DISCUSSION

A most animated and interesting discussion followed and those present expressed the wish for another opportunity to discuss the problem at greater length. It is hoped to arrange a further meeting on this subject in Glasgow in the near future.

In Parliament

Recently in the House of Commons, Mr. Messer asked the Minister of Health if he had considered plans for the reduction of the period of training for the State-registered nurse; and if he had any statement to make in regard to it.

Mr. Bevan said that this was a matter primarily for the General Nursing Council, which was the statutory body responsible for framing rules relating to training for State registration. He understood that the Council were considering the possibility of revising the basic training for State registration, and he would convey to them Mr. Messer's suggestion.

Mr. Messer also asked the Minister if, in view of the shortage of tuberculosis nurses, he would negotiate with the General Nursing Council with a view to securing the recognition of the T.A. Certificate, so that such nurses could be placed on the supplementary register.

Mr. Bevan said that the General Nursing Council had already been approached on this matter and was not prepared to admit persons possessing the Tuberculosis Association Certificate to a supplementary part of the register unless they were also general State-registered nurses. He did not feel able to adopt Mr. Messer's suggestion, since he was advised that it would at present hinder rather than help recruitment for tuberculosis nursing.

Mr. J. Morrison asked the Minister of Health if he would state the arrangements made for the demobilization of members of the V.A.D. and nursing auxiliaries.

Mr. Bevan said that the arrangements for the demobilization of V.A.D.'s in His Majesty's Forces were announced by the Minister of Labour in a statement on October 2. As regarded nursing auxiliaries and other members of the Civil Nursing Reserve, he was hoping to make a statement in a few weeks time about arrangements for their release.

Mr. Hardy asked the Minister of Health whether he was aware that many hospitals and wards were closing down due to shortage of domestic staffs; and what steps he was taking in conjunction with local authorities, joint industrial and Whitley Councils to improve the conditions applicable to domestic staffs employed in hospitals.

Mr. Messer asked the Minister of Health how he proposed to provide sufficient nursing staff for the successful working of a comprehensive national health service.

Mr. Bevan said that he had the whole hospital domestic staff situation, with the nursing situation, under urgent review and hoped to make a statement on both very soon.

Asked in the House of Commons recently by Mr. Dumpleton what steps he proposed to take to improve the bad working conditions and hours of nurses in hospitals and institutions, Mr. Bevan said—I certainly do not accept the implication that bad working conditions for nurses in hospitals and institutions are general. Where they exist they are in large part due to the effects of the war. I am giving this matter the most earnest consideration in consultation with my right honorable friend, the Minister of Labour and National Service, and with the bodies principally concerned, and hope to make a full statement within the next few weeks.

NURSES' APPEAL FOR NURSES

Nation's Fund for Nurses

We are most thankful to have our total rising once again, and we hope that there will be no more such violent collapses as we suffered last week. We had hoped to reach £9,800 by the end of October. With only £16 to obtain we may achieve it early in November. Every penny means a shield against winter illness and cold and when one is old the shield must be a strong one.

Have mothers changed?

TODAY they work harder, they have less help, their day is never ended. But mothers never change as far as babies know. Somehow there is always time for the care a baby needs. Somehow.

And how fully and deeply it is all repaid. There can be few moments in a woman's life that are happier than her baby's bathtime. The delighted gurgles. The little contented noises as the soothing shower of Johnson's powder caresses the tender skin. For over fifty years this powder has been first choice with mothers; yet each new baby seems to find in it a new delight.

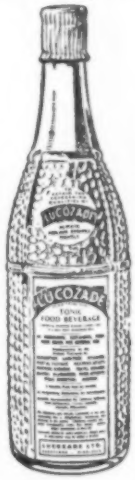
In case of extreme debility . . .



Where there is extremely low vitality and loss of tone in the bodily functions it is a standard practice to maintain strength by giving glucose. If this be offered in the form of LUCOZADE the favourable psychological response it evokes will play a valuable part in aiding the patient — for in LUCOZADE you have a delightfully refreshing beverage. There is a complete absence of the sickly nauseating taste which so often discourages the patient who is offered glucose in any of its ordinary forms.

"I've learnt how to stop Headaches"

None of us can prevent having Headaches. None of us can avoid altogether those days when you wake feeling that you simply daren't get out of bed.

But we can get rid of them, quickly and certainly. I've found that taking one or two Anti-Kamnia tablets make me fit for anything in ten minutes.

A.K. isn't just aspirin. In fact it doesn't contain aspirin at all. It's a brand new formula that's the last word for curing headaches and all sorts of pains. Any chemist can give you A.K., and if you aren't delighted with what it does, he'll give you your money back. Try a packet to-day. 1/5 a box (including tax).

MOIST HEAT THERAPY

In conditions which require Moist Heat applications—but no specialised nursing care—an ANTIPHLOGISTINE poultice is indicated.

This ready-to-use medicated poultice is applied comfortably hot directly to the affected area. It maintains Moist Heat for many hours.

The comforting Moist Heat of an ANTIPHLOGISTINE pack is effective in relieving the pain, swelling, and muscle spasms due to sprains, strains, and contusions.

It is likewise effective in affections of the respiratory system; in relieving the cough, soreness, tightness of the chest, muscular and pleuritic pain.

LORD DAWSON OF PENN SAID IN THE HOUSE OF LORDS:

THERE is something in fresh food . . . : which gives it a place by itself, and no amount of preserved food will, in the case of eggs and milk, entirely replace the value of "fresh eggs and milk."

Fresh cow's milk contains every constituent necessary for the building of bone, muscle and nerves, which the growing infant requires including the full mineral content and vitamins in their natural form.

The addition of a little of Sister Lauras Food makes whole fresh milk completely digestible by even the youngest and most delicate infant. It is a simple cereal product which breaks up the casein in the milk. Many Medical authorities are in favour of this very tiny starch content as being definitely beneficial and helping to educate the infant's digestion to assimilate more solid foods later.
